THE WORLD OF SOCIETY

Home Ceremony Uniting Miss Clark and Mr. Mutchler.

Married Amid Smiling Friends—Mrs. Hinzen Gone to Buy Her Trouseau—Personal Notes.

A charming wedding last night was that of Miss Fidelie Clark and Mr. William Lloyd Mutchler of Easton, Pa. The ceremony took place at the residence of Gen. and Mrs. W. T. Clark, 1528 U street, and was performed by Rev. Dr. Radcliffe. Chrysanthemums and palms adorned the parlor suite, while flowers were used in the first room, where the couple stood to be married, yellow in the halls and pink blossoms in the dining room.

The wedding march, played by the orchestra, heralded the coming of the bride, who was escorted by her father to the bay-window bower, where the groom and his best man, Mr. T. S. Clark, Jr., New York, made their entrance. The bride was dressed in a very dainty toilet of white crepe de chene, fine lace forming the yoke and sleeves. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses. The ushers were Messrs. Matthews, Aubrey Shuman, Harvey Sullivan and Robert Turner. Following the ceremony, a dinner was given in honor of the bride and guests at the residence of the bride's grandfather, Mr. F. Payne, on Payne street. Mr. and Mrs. Jaynes will make their future home in Washington.

THE ALASKAN BOUNDARY.*Mr. John W. Foster to Explain the Modus Vivendi.

The opening lecture in the course offered by the National Geographic Society the coming session will be delivered tonight by Mr. John W. Foster, his subject being "The Alaskan Boundary." After much diplomatic wrangling the disputed line has been temporarily determined by the modus vivendi. Few, however, understand the nature of that settlement. Mr. Foster will trace the dispute back to its beginning and show how at first there was no difference of opinion respecting the possession of any of the now disputed territory. He will show how on all the English maps the boundary line was given as the one on the American maps, and that without previous warning the English claim was first put forward in 1842, after the meeting of the joint high commission.

The lecture will be given in the Congregational Church, corner of 10th and G streets, at 8 p.m., and will be illustrated with slides showing the principal maps bearing upon the dispute.

JUDGE COX'S CODE OF LAWS.*Its Consideration to Be Taken Up by Board of Trade.

The Washington board of trade expects to take up early next week consideration of the code of laws prepared by Judge Cox and reviewed by the Bar Association. This was decided upon at a meeting of the board of directors held yesterday afternoon.

The next meeting will be held in Masonic Hall, and will probably take place in the afternoon.

For several years the board of trade has labored diligently to bring about a satisfactory codification and revision of local statutes, and now that the work needs only congressional approval the board will exert itself to secure congressional sanction of the code at the earliest possible moment.
